REST CHARGE WHICH

On Such Committee

(By International News Service)

BOSTON, June 17—A charge that Postmaster General James A. Farley was violating the law in heading a fund committee to raise money to finance the campaign for re-election of President Roosevelt, was rested today by a group of postal employees, indignant over distribution of circulars asking for a $1 contribution.

They pointed to the federal statute expressly forbidding a presidential employee to hold a position as a member, or officer of any political committee to solicit funds.

Chairman Joseph C. McGrath, of the Democratic State Committee, whose rubber stamped signature appeared on the circular under that of Farley, defended the plan and denied it could be classed as "political activity."

Acting Postmaster Peter F. Tague, whose name appeared on the circular as chairman of the "Roosevelt Nomination Committee," declared the pamphlets were circulated without his knowledge or consent.

Governor James M. Curley, whose name also appeared on the circular, referred all questions to McGrath.

Father Held for Court For Beating Children

Solomon Beatty, colored, 156 Buckley street, was held in $500 bail for court, last night, after a hearing before Justice of Peace James Guy.

Beatty was charged with cruelly beating his son, Solomon, 14, and his daughter, Wilhelmina, 17.

Several neighbors and residents of the vicinity testified to having seen the parent with a strap beat the son until blood flowed. Beatty, Monday night, according to the evidence, whipped his daughter with a twisted rope.

It was also brought out that about six weeks ago after whipping the son with a strap the father compelled the boy to dig in the garden until dark. Neighbors said that while the lad dug he frequently stopped and rubbed his legs and neck where his father had struck him with the strap.

Chief of Police Linford J. Jones told Justice Guy that he had consulted with District Attorney Eastburn and that he wanted Beatty held for court. "Miss Bright will also investigate the case," stated the chief.

LEGION NINE PLAYS
INSIDE BALL AND WINSBristol Team Defeats Strong
Langhorne Club By
Score of 9 to 4WORK SQUEEZE PLAY

Flashing some inside baseball behind the brilliant five hit twirling of Karl Leinheiser, the Bristol Legion team downed Langhorne's strong club 9-4 on Leedom's Field here last evening.

This was the Bristol nine's third win in four starts in the Bucks County Legion League and keeps them in a top position in the loop.

The Bristol club gained five runs via the squeeze play and worked it to a perfection. It was a big five run spurge which won the game for the locals in the fifth frame.

After Langhorne had tied the ball game up in their half of the fifth at 3-3 the Hems managed crew really went to work. Bauroth led off with a single to right. Gallagher bunted and was safe when Hastings left the bag. Dick laid one down, the ball rolling past the pitcher and Bauroth scored. Dick being safe at first. Kalencki went down for the first out.

LaPolla drove Gallagher and Dick to the scoring station with his drive to right field. Tomlinson gained first via Bespham's error and advanced to second on a wild pitch. VanLenten sacrificed both men across with a beautiful lay down along the first base line. Five runs on three hits and an error.

In all the Bristol club gained eight bingles from the deliveries of Charlie Foster, Lefty Horton and Sam Dougherty. Leinheiser limited the Langhorne nine to five.

For a Free BridgeADOPT BILL BY 40-1 VOTE

Another step was taken yesterday toward the construction of a bridge across the Delaware River at Yardley which will make possible the completion of the super-highway between Philadelphia and New York, the first link of which has been built extending from Philadelphia to a point near Janney.

Among the scores of measures considered by the New Jersey Assembly yesterday afternoon was one authorizing the New Jersey State Highway Department to make agreements with Pennsylvania for the construction of a free bridge across the Delaware River at Yardley.

The bill was adopted, 40 to 1, and is expected to receive favorable action in the Senate. It is sponsored by Assemblyman Crawford Jamieson, of Mercer County.

It is expected that as soon as construction of the bridge is assured work of the second link of the super-highway will be started and that this section will be constructed from Janney to Yardley.

SCHOOL BOARD, FACULTY,
HONOR RETIRING TEACHERMiss Rachel E. Bartine is The Guest of Honor at Testimonial DinnerPRESENTED WITH GIFTS

With a company of men and women, including co-workers and former pupils, gathered about her, Miss Rachel E. Bartine, assistant principal of Bristol high school was signally honored last evening, when a testimonial banquet was tendered her by members of the board of directors and faculty of the Bristol public school system. The affair was arranged to fete the one who, after 51 years as a teacher, is retiring from active service.

Eighty covers were placed in the high school cafeteria, and the attractively decorated tables formed a splendid setting for the function.

Friendships which have grown stronger by daily contact, aid and advice which have been given pupils throughout the years, the work of character-building of those who came in contact with her, were told of in the testimonies of business men and women, and teachers of the borough, as they voiced expressions of sadness in the retirement of one whom they have learned to love and revere.

The initial address of the evening was made by Warren P. Snyder, supervising principal of Bristol public schools, who told that the purpose of gathering to honor Miss Bartine was not to mark a parting, but to wish her happiness in a surcease from active duties carried out so well over a period of many years. Mr. Snyder then presented Doron Green, president of Bristol borough school board, who added to Mr. Snyder's remarks: "This is an opportunity for us to express our appreciation for Miss Bartine's long years of service." "Without doubt when our guest of honor first came to the Bristol schools, she dreamed dreams and built air castles, and now after 42 years in the local schools she can look back and find that her dreams have come true." Mr. Green envisioned the manner in which the one who has followed the teaching profession for 51 years will live among her memories. As most of her life was spent in the Bristol schools, she will watch our schools here with intense interest. And as the scholars make good in life she can realize the part she had in helping to shape their destinies. And I believe if we should ask her what one particular thing has given her the greatest happiness throughout life her answer would be "Doing good for others." The large number of boys and girls who have sat in Miss Bartine's classes were mentioned by the school director, Mr. Green continued by telling of the group of teachers who came to Bristol schools at the beginning of this century, and on up to the present time. "They found Miss Bartine a real friend, and the silver friendships of yesterday have ripened into the golden friendships of today."

Mr. Green, in closing, read to the assembly a letter which he had been requested by the board of directors to write to the retiring teacher, and likewise presented to her on behalf of the board members, an electric clock. "This gift carries with it the very high esteem in which you are held by members of the board," he stated. The letter follows:

Bristol, Pa., June 2, 1936.
My dear Miss Bartine:
Your letter apprising the Bristol Public School Board of your determination to retire as teacher, at the end of this school year, was read at the regular meeting held on the above date, at which time the President was instructed to reply, expressing the sentiments entertained by the Board. This year will mark the completion of your forty-fourth year as a teacher in our local schools. In all these years, the service rendered by you has been faithful, loyal and conscientious. You have been ever mindful of the obligations and duties associated with your profession, and have placed the welfare of the child and his rights with regard to the development of citizenship, as the first requisite of your aim and purpose as a teacher.

By your careful, competent and efficient teaching you have contributed no small part in the great scheme of our public school system, to develop the highest type of citizenship, and as a result, our boys and girls have gone out

TWO YOUTHS HERE GIVEN SUSPENDED
SENTENCES BY JUDGEAngelo Marquitti and Salva-

Pleaded GuiltyTOOK CAR ACCESSORIESOther Cases Are Disposed Of at Session of Court Held at Doylestown

DOYLESTOWN, June 17—Two Bristol boys who pleaded guilty to stealing automobile tires and wheels were given suspended prison sentences on Monday by Judge Calvia S. Boyer. The youths, Angelo Marquitti, 20, and Salvatore Giano, 18, both pleaded guilty to larceny and receiving stolen goods.

The youths were arrested by the Bristol police early one morning after a number of machines had been stripped of their tires and other accessories.

Marquitti, for whom it was the initial offense, was placed on probation for three years and no order for the payment of the costs of prosecution was made because he is supporting his parents while earning $12 a week.

Giano, former CCC and WPA worker, had been placed in both a reform school and reformatory because of previous misconduct.

To Marquitti, the Court said: "You have a good reputation. Remember this experience and stay out of any future trouble. You have a job to go to and must support your parents, so watch your step."

I. Louis Rubin, Bristol attorney, counsel for Giano, pleaded with the Court to give Giano another chance. "I don't think he has the makings of a criminal in him. Rather, he is weak and needs to be given the right kind of supervision."

"Do you want to prove to the Court and Mr. Rubin that you are all right? I will appoint Mr. Rubin and County Probation Officer Russo as your probation officers but if you make one mistake you will be sent to the penitentiary," Judge Boyer warned the young man.

Since the apprehension of the two youths, the wave of tire and wheel stealing, including that of auto parts from various cars in Bristol, has stopped.

In 1932 Giano was committed to Glen Mills for breaking into an empty house and in 1930 he was sent to a reformatory for breaking into a store.

He served in a CCC outfit in the wilds of Penna. from August until January 8, when he was honorably discharged because of a lung condition.

Judge Boyer directed Jacob Wingert, Oak Grove hosiery mill logger, who lives in Trenton, N. J., to pay $10 a week toward the support of his wife and two children after hearing testimony for the increase of an order for support.

Mrs. Lenore Wingert, South Langhorne, the wife of the defendant and mother of two children, testified that an order of $8 a week was not sufficient because one or the children is in constant need of medical attention.

The original order was made September 21, 1934, when the children were three and two years old, respectively. At yesterday's hearing it was increased $2.

Wingert is alleged to earn $35 a week. The defendant denied this, however, and testified that his wife, who is also employed as a looper at the same hosiery mill, earns as much or more than he does.

Six paroles were granted, as follows:

ALF M. LANDON AND FRANK KNOX

The ticket named by the Republican convention in Cleveland grows in strength hour by hour and day by day. One cannot escape that impression, and the reason is that the more the two candidates—Gov. Landon and Col. Knox—are studied, the more their qualifications become apparent.

Both these men are not only liberals in the best sense, but they have been liberals since the day of Theodore Roosevelt. Both helped in the organization of that famous progressive movement which made Col. Roosevelt an even greater and more unforgettable figure than he had ever been. These men—Landon and Knox—were fighting the political and economic battles of the common people before the present New Dealers were ever heard of.

Governor Alf Landon was one of the foremost Republicans in Kansas who came to Col. "Teddy" Roosevelt and pledged his loyalty and his service in the great crusade of 1912. Col. Frank Knox not only fought shoulder to shoulder with him politically but he fought with him on the field of war. Col. Knox bears his title because he was a member of the famous "Rough Riders" who rode up San Juan hill and made brilliant history for the annals of the American army.

Both Landon and Knox are men of great intellectual and physical vigor. They are seized with deep and abiding convictions, and because of their sincerity they have the ability to inspire the millions to whom they will speak. Both of them are strong, plain, simple, natural men—men who wear the same sized hats they wore before they came into public life.

EAT WHAT IS NORMAL

Recently Dr. Morris Fishbein said that the best advice to the young and healthy on the subject of diet is to eat a normal "rounded" diet of meat and potatoes, vegetables and fruits. But this advice actually is best only because medical science knows so woefully little of the mysteries of food.

An account of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's observations on the diet of the Eskimos recently was published. He dealt with a leading diet mystery—the fact that Eskimos have no dental caries but very soon get them if fed on white men's food.

The Eskimos normally violate every familiar canon of diet, including Dr. Fishbein's. They live practically wholly on meat and fish. They do not have a "rounded" diet in any sense, for they frequently live for months on a single sort of meat. They do not chew their food as scientific practice recommends, but bolt it whole. Some do chew caribou bones, to obtain the marrow, but others live wholly on seal meat and, chewing not at all, still have perfect teeth.

In short, the reason for their immunity to dental caries is a reason thus far unknown to science. We only know, because they lose their immunity when eating civilized foods, that the reason must be one connected with diet.

That being so, it follows that our own normal diet, which produces caries, is not a good one. Yet this very diet is what Dr. Fishbein advises, and his advice must be accepted, for the simple reason that, as yet, there is no better. For both Eskimos and others the safest dietary advice still is, apparently, to eat what is "normal" to your own kind.

DOWSERS FALL DOWN

Some 60 dowers (water diviners) got together in England a few days ago and underwent stringent tests. For instance, there were 70 overturned flower pots, under one of which was a pound of gold, under another a pound of silver, under another a pound of copper. The dowers were asked to locate, by means of their wands of willow or hazel or whalebone, the pots which hid the metals. One man located the copper, one woman the silver, but no one accurately placed the gold.

Then the dowers were asked to find a boy who, they were told, was within three-quarters of a mile. They were given fragments of a shirt which the boy had worn. No one located the boy, who was hidden in a hollow tree. The dowers said the pieces of shirt were too clean; if they had been given ships of an old sweatband from a hat, they could have found him. They needed more "extraneous."

John Clarke, of Melton Mowbray, was misled by his failure to dowse the lad, as he is famous for locating corpses. "He has already successfully dowsed 80 corpses," says the report. "There is a long waiting list of people requiring his services." Perhaps it is easier to find a dead body than a live one.

In view of the poor results, our political parties will continue to rely on conventions and primaries for the discovery of statesmen, rather than employ dowers for this work. Why, we do not know, for the dowsing method, when it fails, doesn't find anything.

Ethelyn telephoned.
"Miss Crawford, I mean Dr. Crawford—I think you better call her that, is giving a lecture at the Women's City club tonight and she says she'll meet you there in the lobby at 8. Downstairs—right where you come in the door. And be sure to be there first, because you know how people like that hate to wait for others. Georgia was wonderful about it, when I explained about you."

"I'll be there! Oh, Ethelyn, I can never thank you!"
"My dear, you haven't got the job yet!"

"I know. But to have the chance—oh, Ethelyn, I'm so grateful! If I can ever do anything for you—"

"It's quite all right. I was glad to do it. And now you mustn't keep me, because the chief—"

"Ethelyn—how will I KNOW HER?"

"Oh, she's a great big tall woman with black hair. She'll be looking for you, too."

"But there are lots of tall women!"

"You'll find her all right!"
Ethelyn hung up.

A superstitious fear that if she said anything about it, her luck would change, kept Mary from taking Margot into her confidence, as she dressed that evening.

The more she thought about it, the more vitally necessary that job seemed. She just had to get away. Just worrying about Holden and his long face had been enough, but now that she'd made such a fool of herself about Bennett, it was too much. She couldn't stand it. Oh, if there was just some way to make Jamie's aunt take her—

She decided to wear the tailored suit, rather than the more flattering gray coat and hat. She looked more business-like in the suit, and a woman would rather have a secretary look competent than pretty.

But she took great pains with her makeup. Not too much lipstick but enough to look smart. Not too much powder, but enough to stick on for the next hour or two, so that she wouldn't have to do anything more to it. It wouldn't be very wise to be caught adding powder or lipstick.

She was pleased when she was ready. Smart, but not too expensive suit, very, very clean white blouse, good fitting pumps with heels that had just been straightened, no jewelry, no fussy curls . . . but still feminine, and young.

If Crawford didn't take her it wasn't her fault, she'd done every thing she could think of to look the part.

She started out in a blaze of confidence, but it crumpled a little as she neared the club.

Her lips felt dry, and she wondered if the powder had blown off her nose, leaving it shiny.

She looked around.

Four women sat together on a long settee, two on another . . . none seemed very tall. . . .

On the stroke of 8 a majestic woman in a very long black dinner gown and a short crimson velvet jacket entered the door.

Mary's heart turned over. There wasn't a doubt in her mind but that it was Dr. Crawford.

She stood up, approached the woman with a manner that was shy in spite of her effort to appear sure of herself.

"Dr. Crawford?"

"Yes, my dear. You're Georgia's Mary Shannon, I'm sure. Shall we go up to the lounge where we can talk?"

Feeling like an insignificant child, Mary trailed after.

Two women, important in their gardenias and fur, came forward. One of them held out her hand.

"Dr. Crawford, this is a very great pleasure! I'm Mrs. . . ."

The rest was lost in a rush of eager words that weren't meant for Mary. But Dr. Crawford hadn't forgotten her. She linked an arm through hers, dismissed the woman graciously. In the elevator she said "Darn snob!"

Mary grinned. She couldn't help it. Dr. Crawford grinned. And when she laughed you saw that she was really quite a young woman, in spite of her mannish figure, her imposing manner. She had lovely black hair that she wore in braids around her head and eyes that were clear, light blue.

Why, she was DARLING! Anyone would love her. Not the least bit stuck up! Saying "Darn snob"—imagine that!—a famous psychologist saying that—

Dr. Crawford smiled again. "Now tell me about yourself, for I've only a very few minutes."

Instantly Mary's mind was a blank. Her prepared speech left her. Fortunately Dr. Crawford did not wait for an answer. She proceeded to ask questions. "Stenographer? Accurate? Quick? Compose your own letters if need be? Good! Know any grammar? Would you say 'None was able to understand' or 'None were able to understand'?"

"None is singular, I'd say none was—"

"Good! Spelling? How do you spell hyperacusis?"

"I don't know."

"What would you do if I asked you to write it?"

"I'd look it up in the dictionary. It must begin hyper—"

"Good! Do you like dogs?"

"Oh, yes, we've always had a dog—"

"Good, again! Because I have two. They have to be exercised, of course, and I'm fussy about their food. . . . Why do you want to give up your present position and travel? Not happy at home?"

"There isn't any home right now. My mother and father had to move to Petaluma—they're ranching—and there's nothing there for me, so I—"

"I see. Do you think you could put up with me? It's only fair to warn you. My loving family finds me just a little trying at times!"

"Oh, yes, if you think you could put up with me? I'm afraid I'm a little stupid at times! I—"

Dr. Crawford looked at her jeweled watch.

"I'm afraid I'll have to go. I've some women to meet. In the future it will be one of your duties to present convincing reasons why I can't meet them. Oh, yes, you may have the position if you want it. Do you understand that it is a hundred a month plus expenses? Is that satisfactory? Then it's settled. Be ready to leave at once. I'm going to my sister's lake lodge in British Columbia first. I may wish to leave within the week. You'll be ready?"

"I'll be ready," Mary promised. That was all there was to it. The job was hers, and travel, beginning with a trip to British Columbia, was just ahead.

It was really too easy!

She walked out in a sort of trance, a dreamy smile on her glowing face. Two boys in a roadster stopped and honked, mistaking her smile. But she didn't even see them.

Back in the boarding house she passed Mrs. Henry and Oscar in the hall, smiled at them warmly, made some unintelligible answer to her greetings, climbed upstairs to her room, undressed and tumbled into bed, still not quite conscious of what she was doing, or why she was doing it.

But when Margot came in a little after 10, she was still wide awake, ready to talk.

Nothing ever really surprised Margot. All she said was, "That's fine! It will be a real experience for you. . . . And let's hope you leave before the hibernian Mr. Holden finds out, and blows out his brains!"

"Heavens, yes! Whatever you do, don't tell him! And won't I be glad to put a few hundred miles between us!"

She was sobered for a minute, but now, with a new life opening up before her, she couldn't take poor Milt and his suicide very seriously. She dismissed him from her mind in ten seconds. It occurred to her that she had a tremendous lot to do . . . letters to write, packing . . .

She'd have to ask Oscar to get her wardrobe trunk out of the attic, and notify Mrs. Henry, and see about getting a girl to take her place—which ought to be easy, what with a dozen girls for every job . . . unless Ethelyn was right and Bennett had it all axed to hire Mrs. Samson anyway.

Margot, getting into bed, was amazed to see Mary getting out. "What in the world are you up to now?"

"I'm just coming to! I've thought of a million letters I'll have to write. Will the light bother you?"

"Sister, when I sleep nothing bothers me. You ought to know that."

Mary wrote a long letter to Ma, ending:

"And I know that you will be awfully happy to have me do what I wanted to from the first, be a private secretary."

"This Dr. Crawford is writing a book, and she gives lectures. I'll meet wonderful people. It's a great opportunity for me."

(Better not mention just yet that Dr. Crawford was Jamie Todd's aunt! Ma was so apt to worry—)

"I may leave almost any day for Canada. Think of me traveling like that! But I'll find some way to see you first. I couldn't go without seeing you. All my love to you both—"

"Mary."

Her eyes were wet when she finished. She hadn't realized that she'd be going where she couldn't see them. The days had slipped by and the weeks. . . . She could have found a way to go long before this. But she'd make it up to them. . . . She could save money now. . . . Do lots of things she couldn't do before. So she comforted herself. Wiped her eyes. Decided she'd better get some sleep.

It was hard to tell Bennett. He was all pepped up about what he had been doing for the line. She couldn't very well interrupt to say she was leaving.

He'd booked enough new freight to make the last two voyages pay a real profit. The S.S. Francisca D. had a full cargo of fur for Capetown already, and the return cruise was nearly booked what with furs from China, and beams from Japan and—

She blurted it out, unable to hold back her news any longer.

"I'm leaving! I hope it won't inconvenience you. I want to leave—right away!"

"Leaving! Why, you said—I understood you to say—"

"Oh, I'm not getting married. It's another job. I'm going to be secretary to Dr. Emilie Crawford. It's all very sudden. I knew you wouldn't care. . . . Mrs. Samson wants my job, doesn't she?"

"Surely that isn't why you are leaving? You haven't thought you'd be dropped out of school?"

"Oh, no! I mean my taking this hasn't anything to do with that. I'm just glad you won't be inconvenienced, that's all. I WANT to leave! I'm just sick of it here! I want to get away! I'm so disgusted with everything. I don't know—" you have an important position. I've got to grab the opportunities I get—I've got to take care of myself. You've been awfully nice to me, and I appreciate it, but I—"

You aren't happy here, you haven't my faith in work and steamships, is that it?"

"Yes—that's it. I—I guess you don't understand. Do you—mind?"

"Mind? Well, it's hardly up to me to . . . No, if you want to leave I wouldn't try to persuade you to stay. You might get Mrs. Samson on the telephone for me. You know the number?"

He went into his office, closed the door.

Slowly, she dialed the number. Of course she hadn't expected him to care . . . but he might at least have PRETENDED he'd miss her! The cold, calculating FISH! Good thing for her . . . she was smart enough to know that the crazy feeling she had for him wasn't love—

Just cheap infatuation!

Two Youths Here Given Suspended Sentences

N. J., pleaded guilty to drunken driving, served thirty days, and the costs of prosecution amounted to $36.11. Parole was granted by Judge Boyer.

George Bentliff, Edgely, who pleaded guilty to drunken driving and has been in prison since April 15, was granted a parole by Judge Boyer on condition that he pay the costs, amounting to $32.15, in three months.

Pleading guilty to malicious mischief, November 4, 1935, and having been in prison since then, serving his minimum, Herbert O'Neil, a Negro, Langhorne, was granted a parole by Judge Boyer.

William Whitaker, Bristol, who pleaded guilty to a charge of larceny February 13, and was sentenced to serve not less than three months, was granted a parole by Judge Boyer. The costs of prosecution amounted to $125.13.

President Judge Keller granted Wesley Pettit, 28, this place, who pleaded guilty to resisting an officer and has been in prison since March 2, a parole on condition that he pay the costs of prosecution in three months at $10 a month.

Serving eight and one-half months of his term, John Kakas, of Trenton, N. J., who pleaded guilty to aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery, was granted a parole by Judge Boyer, who directed him to pay the costs of prosecution, amounting to $60.84, at the rate of $15 per month.

Solomon Catz, Doylestown township junk dealer, who was given a hearing before Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Monday afternoon on an appeal from two charges of the motor vehicle code, illegal parking and not displaying flares, was discharged on the latter charge but fined $10 and the costs of prosecution on the parking infraction.

Sergeant A. A. Discavage, of the State Highway Patrol, the first witness to testify, stated that he arrested Catz on both charges because he was parked illegally with two cars, one of which was being towed and had no lights on it, on the Doylestown-Buckingham highway, near Spring Valley.

"On the first car the lights were burning, the motor was running, but on the second car there were no lights nor flares near it. I stayed there about 15 minutes, believing the operator must be in the vicinity. It was at least 30 minutes before Catz arrived at the scene of the parked car. I told me that he had lost a rim off a wheel and that he and the boy went back to look for it."

"Catz had no flares with him and there were no lights on the car which was being towed."

Catz, who defended his own case without counsel, explained to Judge Boyer that he did not have to carry flares on his truck because it is not required by the law; only vehicles of certain weight must display and carry flares.

"While driving along I felt a heavy shock and stopped to see what it was. One of the wheels had dropped off and the axle was dragging. I left the motor running and all the lights on and started to walk back to find the wheel. I had not been gone 15 minutes, maybe five or seven, but not as long as the officer says."

"When I was taken before the Justice of the Peace, he said, 'Do you have $40 and are you ready to settle the case?' I said, 'No; I will appeal to a higher court.'"

"My truck does not come in the class that requires flares, but I know better now, and your Honor, I am carrying them with me because I don't want to get into any more trouble."

Judge Boyer found the defendant, who has been a resident of the county for nine years and was never in any other trouble, guilty of the illegal parking. He was fined $10 and directed to pay the costs of prosecution.

"Even if the law doesn't require you to carry flares, you had better do so in order to avoid an accident hereafter. You were lucky. There is a doubt here concerning the facts and the defendant should always have the benefit of that doubt. You are discharged on the not-displaying-flares charge and the costs will be placed on the county."

Pleading guilty to assault and battery with automobile and failure to render assistance following an accident, Richard Cooper, 22, 25 South Lincoln avenue, Newtown, was given a suspended sentence by Judge Boyer on condition that he pay the costs of prosecution in installments of $10 a month and was placed on probation for a year.

The young man, who bore an excellent reputation, and is employed by the State Highway Department, was arrested by Constable Joseph Seader, in Crofton, when he collided with another automobile on Memorial Day.

At the time of the collision, he was operating the car, which belonged to his brother-in-law, without an operator's license. It was testified that he paid $50 to the man who was driving the other car toward defraying the expenses.

No one in the car was injured.

"Fortunately, you have a good reputation. People seem to think well of you and it is no doubt deserved. Your accident grew out of three very foolish acts. The first, to drive without an operator's license was very foolish."

"That you didn't stop after the accident was the second foolish thing you did. Do you know that a man may be sent to jail for three years for doing that? It is a very serious offense."

"That you didn't make a clean breast of it to an officer was also foolish."

Several residents from Newtown, including his mother who broke down on the stand, served as character witnesses. They all testified that the young man took good care of his mother, aided in supporting her, and has never been known to take a drink.

COLORFUL ATTRACTION FOR BALL GAME TONIGHT

By T. M. Juno

One of the most colorful attractions to appear here for quite some time is scheduled for the Landreth Ball Park tonight. Buck Lai's All-Hawaiians will match up with Dave Landreth's Seed Company team. The first pitch will sail across the plate at 6:15 sharp. Many a powerful team has left the Hawaiian Islands in the past, but none, Honolulu sports writers are agreed, can compare with the 1936 edition that has been lined up by Buck Lai, former member of the New York Giants, for his tour of the United States this year.

Like a chain of paradise isles, this outfit has everything—color, ability, and class. In a word, the All-Hawaiian squad is simply the "tops" in Hawaiian baseball and the player indeed is not worth mentioning who is not on it.

Buck Lai, head of the club has plenty of what it takes to make things click on the diamond. Although 42, Lai looks and acts like a man in his late 20s. The fates have been kind to the Hawaiian athlete who boasts of a career in the national pastime that few could equal. And from indications, Lai has no intentions of quitting from active competition either. Just the other night against the Wisconsin team, Lai collected five hits in five official trips to the plate.

Counting this season, the boss of the Hawaiian Stars will have played 26 years of baseball in fast company. Lai broke into Honolulu's senior league in 1910 at the tender age of 16. Lai's son is also a member of his barnstorming aggregation and may fill in one of the posts tonight in the outfield.

Below are a few of the stars picked by Lai to represent the Islands and made the trip to the United States and will be present on Landreth's field tonight:

Alfred (Frisco) Ali Naha, Hawaii's speedball king and voted the island's most effective righthander. Manuel (Awilaw) Kahuku, greatest pitching sensation in Hawaiian baseball, who critics claim could hold his own with the best Class AA righthander in the United States.

Lawrence (Peanuts) Kuninisa, "Little Giant of Hawaiian baseball," who was the base-running champion of the islands for the third successive year last season.

William Francis Whaley, voted the most valuable pitcher in Hawaiian Winter league season and who twirled the Lidows to two senior league championships.

The home run hitter of the team is Walter Rope, who plays shortstop. Another slugger is Johnny Murray, who is supposed to have more natural ability than Henry "Prince" Oana who failed to make the grade with the Phillies.

Manager Dave Landreth is undecided as to whom he will nominate to twirl against the Hawaiians, but most likely it will be Ashby with Sid Purcell doing the relieving. Bruce will play first; Heftman, second; Malmusbury, short; Dougherty, third; Barrett, left; Hines, center; and Pitko, right.

VINCE DELIA MAY HAVE STOGGINS AS OPPONENT

Vince Delia, who, in his last appearance here, was stopped by Tony Sorello in the second round, will appear on the next amateur boxing card to be presented by the St. Ann's Athletic Association in their arena, Wood and Franklin streets. The date of the show is Monday, June 22.

Delia is training hard under the direction of Sammy Moffo and expects to be in tip-top shape for his comeback. His opponent for the show will most likely be Earl Stoggins, fast Sigma Theta warrior. Delia feels certain that he will be able to whip the colored fighter.

Matchmaker Patsey Moffo is now working on the card and will make his announcement of bouts as soon as they are sanctioned by the Middle Atlantic district of the A. A. U.

JEFFERSON A. C. TOSSES GAME TO HIBERNIANS

Last night on the Landreth ball park field, the Jefferson A. C. tossed away a game to the Hibernians. Score was 3-4 and it was the eleventh straight triumph for the McDevittmen and places them closer to the first half championship.

Seven errors coming at crucial moments of the tilt gave the game to the Hibs. The Mules were very erratic, especially in the third and fifth frames. The mis-plays ruined the good game that was being pitched by Ralphie Narcisi.

The winning moundsman was Roy Devlin who allowed the Jeffersonians but five hits and had them well-scattered. Wild tosses to second by Bounds caused two of the Mules' runs. The winners had eight hits, with Bounds and Joe Roe getting two each. Frank Frankovic made a pair of safeties for the Tomlinson-men.

Governor Landon is "Alf" to his barber, his grocer, to the successful man and the poor man. He is like most of the men we know, a sincere friend, a real American. His smile is not artificial and his handshake is regular. Everything about him is just genuine. As for Frank Knox, knowing him as we do, we just know there isn't a truer, more sincere American in the whole country than he.

Both men believe in the American governmental system and the Constitution. They are standing on a fine, liberal, workable platform, and a platform that will be fulfilled and not scrapped as was the Democratic one in 1932.

Landon and Knox go forth in a holy crusade for the preservation of the American form of government, American principles, and the right, privilege and liberties of the American people.

School Board, Faculty, Honor Retiring Teacher

from the schools and become an honor to society and a credit to their alma mater. Those who have supplemented their high school course with a college career, have been most appreciative of the thoroughness of the specific branch of study in which you have specialized.

In addition to our admiration of your efficiency and thoroughness as a teacher, we have come to appreciate your friendship. The high esteem in which you are held by all who know you, exhibits to us in no uncertain way, the great loss which the school shall sustain, by reason of your retirement. The place which you have occupied in our school system for so many years, will seem strange without you. The confidence, the responsibility, the dependence which we have placed in you, must now of necessity be borne by another. To say that your retirement will not be felt keenly by all who are associated with our local school system would be an untruth.

Yet while we regret the necessity which compels your retirement, we are not unmindful of the reward that is due you, after your long years of service. Accordingly, we congratulate you upon the completion of a long, active and satisfactory career as a teacher. We assure you of our warmest appreciation of your professional activities and desire to express the hope that God in His infinite wisdom, may see fit to spare you life for many years, that you may enjoy a surcease from labor, as a worthy reward for your many years of unselfish devotion to the teaching profession.

Very truly yours,
DORON GREEN, President
Members of the board of directors were presented to the gathering in the order of their years of service. Emil Metzger, treasurer, was the first introduced by Mr. Snyder. His witty remarks were terminated by voicing his appreciation to Miss Bartine for her years of service, and her co-operation. "We wish you all success, and hope you will not forget us here in Bristol."

Other members of the board who responded to introductions, and who expressed their high regard for the one who is leaving their midst are: Mrs. Asa Fabian, George Molden; vice president Stanford K. Runyan, Arthur P. Brady. Another guest presented was Dr. William C. LeCompte, school physician, as was also Paul V. Forster, acting secretary of the board, and president of the Fathers' Association. Mr. Runyan advised the one who has taught a half century to "Play and get some real pleasure from life," and as a suggestion mentioned the pleasure and relaxation afforded him through fishing. Advice from the numbers called upon included that of a humorous character and also of a more serious trend. Mr. Brady visioned the manner in which the guest of honor can look back with pleasure on her years of effort toward character-building for hundreds of pupils. "Your years of service have been years of kindness, integrity and ability. The salary paid can never measure up to the service Miss Bartine has put into our schools." Mr. Forster voiced the appreciation of the Fathers' Association "for what you have done in the community. Your contribution will be felt for years to come."

A number of co-workers of Miss Bartine were also on the speakers' list. David Hertzler, principal of the high school, and the last principal whom Miss Bartine served as assistant, presented to her on behalf of the high school faculty, a bouquet of mixed blossoms.

Miss Effie Watson, principal of the grades in the high school building, and who for many years has been associated with Miss Bartine, added her tribute. She told of her enjoyment of being associated over such a lengthy period with the honored guest, and in fancy visioned the manner in which the retiring teacher will spend the days to come. A humorous trend was struck, with Miss Bartine living a life of great ease, spending the morning in the garden, the afternoon on the golf links, and in the evening displaying at social functions (as she takes a "fling" at society) the most attractive gowns of the day. In her concluding remarks Miss Watson expressed the hope that "the coming years may be as pleasant and enjoyable as those you have already enjoyed, and that you might have fond recollections of Bristol."

Another co-worker, Miss Jane Rogers, principal of Washington street school, told of the "arrows" sent out by Miss Bartine "hitting their marks." "The thoughts and expressions passed on to your students have been so well chosen that they have found root. Your work here has helped to make Bristol a more pleasant place in which to live." A former pupil of Miss Bartine, and who for the past few years has been associated with her as a member of the high school faculty, William Boyd, also spoke. He told of three things he valued from Miss Bartine's classes: "You were always striving to make us think; you strove to have us secure an appreciation for English which you had; and you endeavored to lift us up and find some goal for which we might strive."

"Although we regret that you are not to be in active service with us," said Mr. Snyder as he spoke to Miss Bartine, "we do want you to visit with us frequently." And in thanking her for her work as vice-principal, he stated "At all times I was able to depend on you, and your judgment." He mentioned reports from her former pupils, telling "of aid not gained from text-books, but from you. . . . We look on this occasion not as a parting, but an opportunity for you to enjoy yourself."

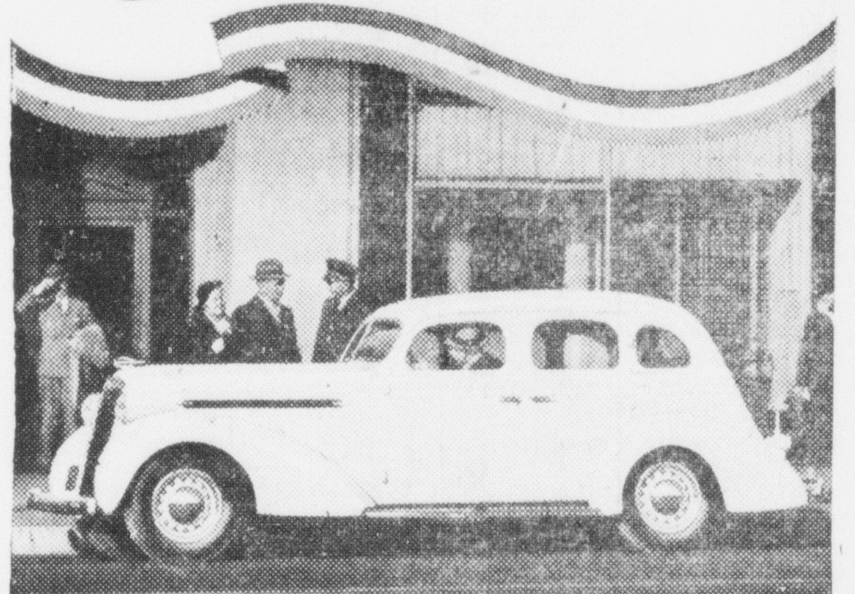

Miss Bartine in response to the testimonials said "I didn't recognize myself as the person you have been speaking of. The directors have always been so good to me. I always found them ready to listen; and their help and their faith in me have made it possible for me to do what they say I have done."

As gifts from the entire faculty membership of Bristol public schools, Principal Snyder presented the honored one with a suit-case and matching hand-bag.

The attractive menu cards carried Miss Bartine's favorite quotation: "Make the most of yourself, for that is all there is of you" (Emerson).
